DETAILED ACTION

Continued Examination Under 37 CFR 1.114

A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on 10/17/05 has been entered.

1. This action is responsive to amendment filed 10/17/05.
2. Claims 6-11 are pending in the application.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 6 and 11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Ellenby et al. (5,625,765) in view of Skolmoski (6,574,352).

Claim 6, Ellenby et al. discloses a method of operating image display apparatus, which method comprises combining electronically in a common pixel format a low resolution image component from a first source, and a high resolution image component from a second source which is different from the first source (col. 3, lines 54-57); whereby the high resolution image component is able to be positioned anywhere in a display obtained from the image display apparatus (col. 11, lines 24-26). Ellenby et al does not specifically teach that the low resolution image is a wide field of view and the high resolution image is a narrow field of view, this is disclosed in Skolmoski in column 1 lines 15-20. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to use wide field of view with low resolution and narrow field of view with high resolution because this gives the user a compromise between seeing the whole image and specific details which saves on memory requirements. Only using high resolution would require more memory, but having both saves on memory because low resolution requires less.

Art Unit: 2671

Claim 11, Ellenby et al discloses in which the low resolution wide field of view image component is of a background scene, and in which the high resolution narrow field of view image component is of a target (col. 10, lines 1-20).

5. Claims 7-10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Ellenby et al. (5,625,765) in view of Skolmoski (6,574,352) and further in view of Sussman et al. (5,686,960).

Claims 7-10, Ellenby et al does not disclose in which the low resolution image is resampled, is interpolated to increase the pixel count to that of the highest resolution imagery; however, this is disclosed in Sussman et al (col. 18, lines 10-25); the composite imagery is stored in a frame buffer (col. 31, lines 44-49); the frame buffer is segmented to drive a matrix of display devices (col. 39, line 38 through col. 40, line 16) It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to incorporate the resampling, interpolating and frame buffer taught by

Sussman into the computer generated imagery of Ellenby system, because it would reconstruct the intensity of the pixel, resampling process may be implemented as a filtering in the final image.
